DEATH OF MR. J. H. CANDY

We have seldom known a case illustrating the uncertainty of life, or the fact “that man proposes but God disposes,” than is furnished by the death of Mr. J. H. CANDY. For many years he kept the Crown Hotel, and in that capacity was successful and respected. A few weeks since he made arrangements for retiring from the business and passing the remainder of his days in the quiet ease he had so well earned. We understand it was his intention to leave the town, but before doing so he, with Mrs. CANDY, went to pass a few days with Mrs. FITCH, of High-street. There he was taken ill, and his malady rapidly assumed such complications that several medical men consulted as to his case. They could afford no relief, however, and he gradually sank and passed quietly to his rest on Friday afternoon. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, and a great number of local tradesmen who had been associated with him for many years, showed their respect by following his remains to their last resting place.
