Charles FISHER, aged 76 was found dead at his home, 37 High-Street, Oakfield on Monday. The facts were reported to the Coroner who dispensed with an inquest, death being due to natural causes. A native of the town, Mr. FISHER served 22 years in the Royal Navy, being on active service during the first world war. For about 30 years he was a familiar figure at the Esplanade railway station as the last of the town porters, an occupation which disappeared with the growth of the taxi service. He surrendered his licence a few years ago. He was unmarried.
