ISLE OF WIGHT OBSERVER Sat 27th March 1869

“IN DEATH THEY WERE NOT DIVIDED.”---There now lie side by side in a small house in Warwick-street, two old inhabitants of Ryde, William SAUNDERS, a journeyman mason well-known to all the master builders in the town, and his wife. Both are upward of 80 years of age, and expired within a few hours of each other. The expense of keeping the bodies and souls of this aged couple together has for a long time past been cheerfully borne by their son Charles SAUNDERS, also a journeyman mason, and we hope that this announcement will have the effect of causing some friends who were acquainted with the deceased, to render some trifling assistance towards their interment.
