CHARLES HENRY HERBERT

Charles married Bessie Henley in 1914 and spent all their married life in 104 Arthur street (Which is where the picture was taken). He spent his early years as a blacksmith. He had a cart with which he would go round mending pots and pans. He served in the Hampshire Regiment during the first world war but because of his blacksmith background he was moved to the Royal Flying Corps to help mend the early by-planes. In later life he was a steward in the social club which was down the passage by the of Stainers Dairy at the top of the high street. He also served behind the bar at the London Hotel.
